

PLANET-MAN: BRUISER

He was too tired
for mercy.

The HQ finally went quiet.

It is time for bed.

They stood up yawning.

Then the floor turned white.

Hoppette came through sweating.

Something followed her fear.

What is wrong?

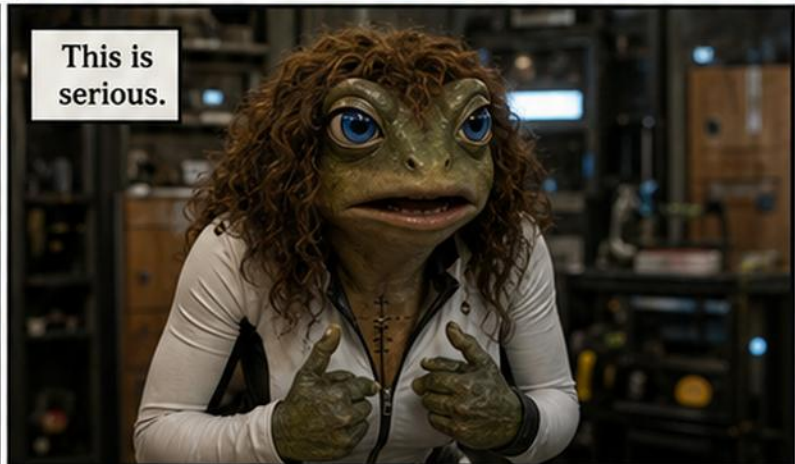

No. You need sleep.

I'll handle this.

You could not handle me.

This is serious.

He has been exhausted.

Oh no. He's already here.

Planet-Man woke up angry.

His body did not wake with him.

Bruiser caught the punch.

Is this your god?

Hoppette jumped anyway.

The red eye opened.

Planet-Man chose fog first.

The gas giant opened.

Bruiser let go.

Stone worlds gathered.

The red eye hunted them.

They moved like bullets.

Bruiser crossed his arms.

The stones broke.

Bruiser did not.

He tackled Planet-Man down.

Planet-Man had one breath.

The laser charged.

Ice answered.

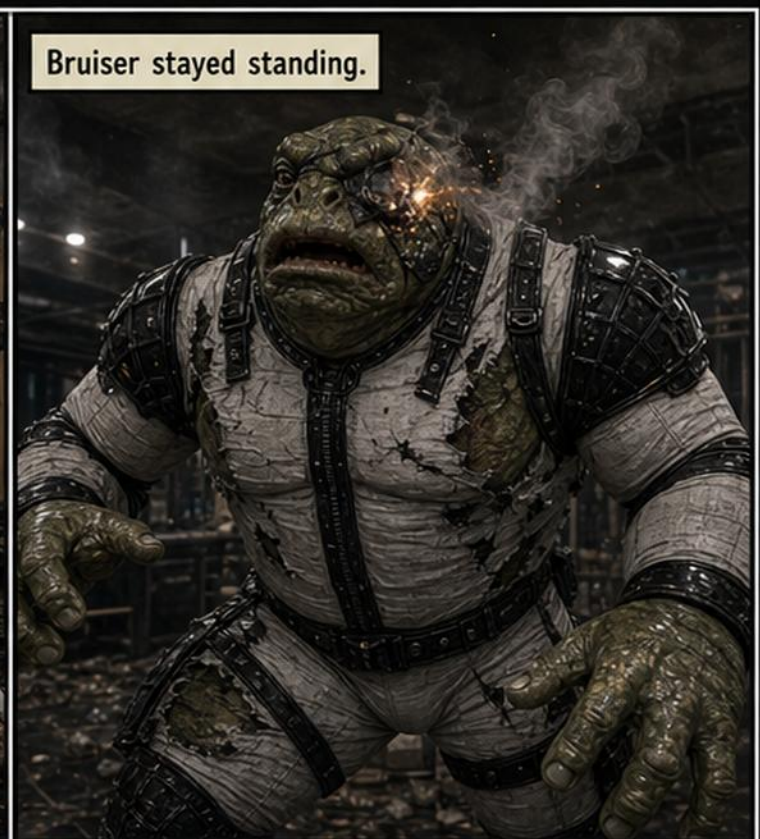

The blast went home.

Planet-Man kicked him off.

Bruiser stayed standing.

So the rings came out.

Durability has edges.

The armor tore.

The monster bled.

Planet-Man could barely see.

Rage held him upright.

One last world burned.

The volcano fired.

Bruiser hit the wall.

Then Planet-Man's eyes closed.

The room went quiet again.

