The Cosmic Debut

Jack Blue floated calmly into Class 1A, and every desk turned toward him.

Professor Lightman welcomed the rare new student warmly.

Jack introduced himself simply.

He asked to be treated like any other classmate.

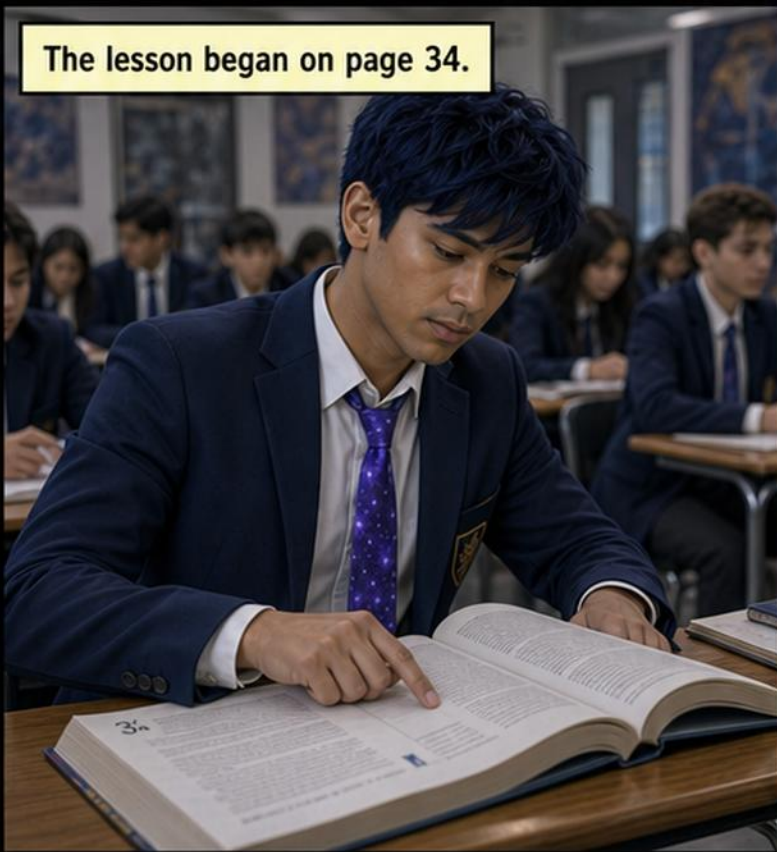

Lightman smiled at the humility and pointed to an open desk.

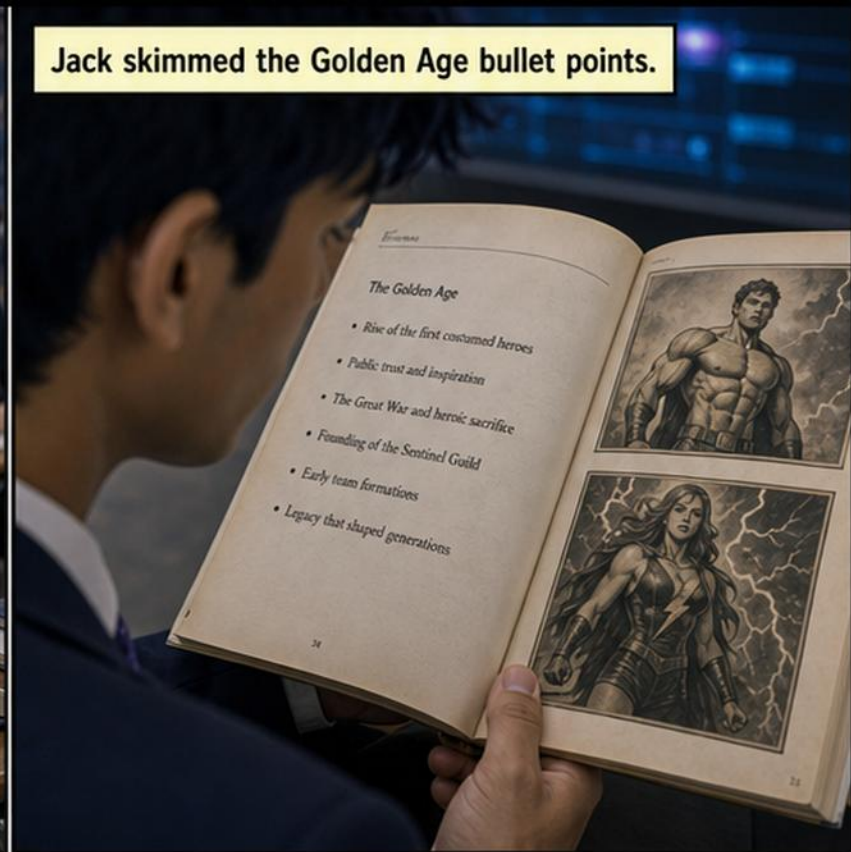

Jack sat beside Miss Aurora, whose blue eyes studied him with curiosity.

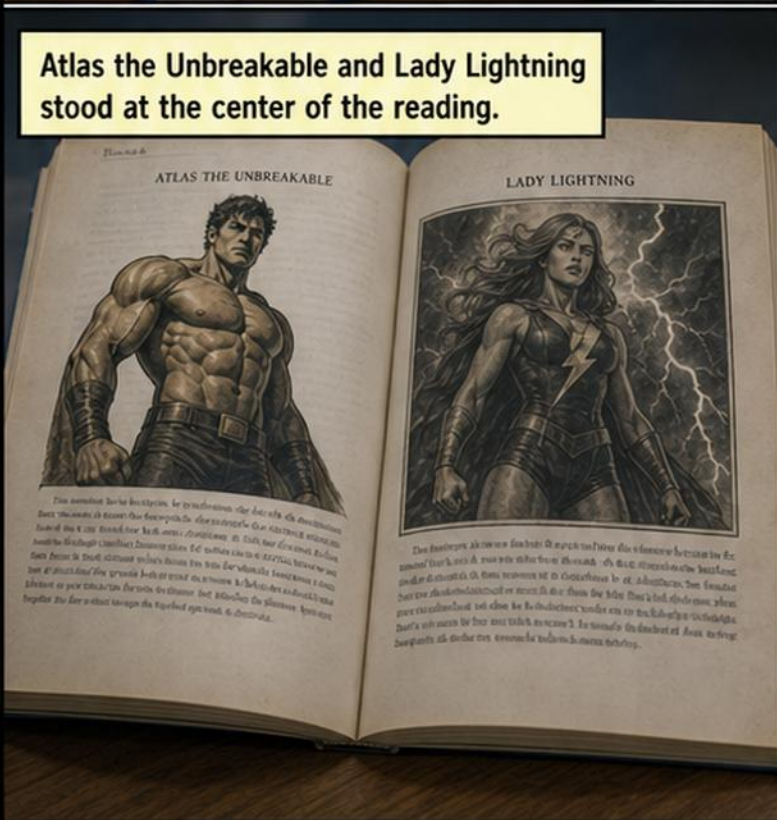

The lesson began on page 34.

Jack skimmed the Golden Age bullet points.

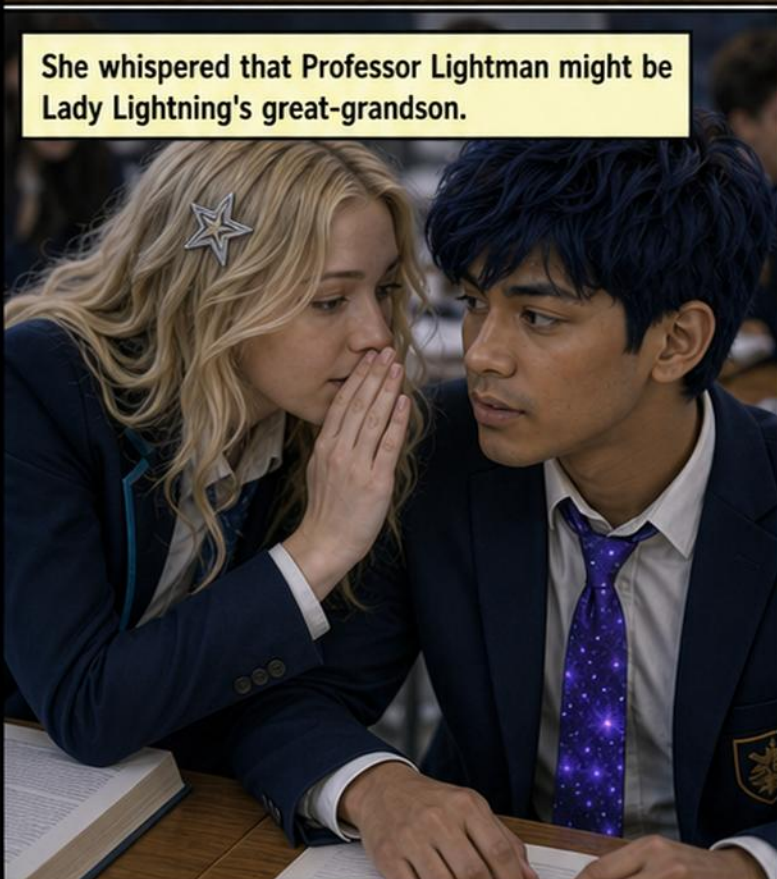

Atlas the Unbreakable and Lady Lightning stood at the center of the reading.

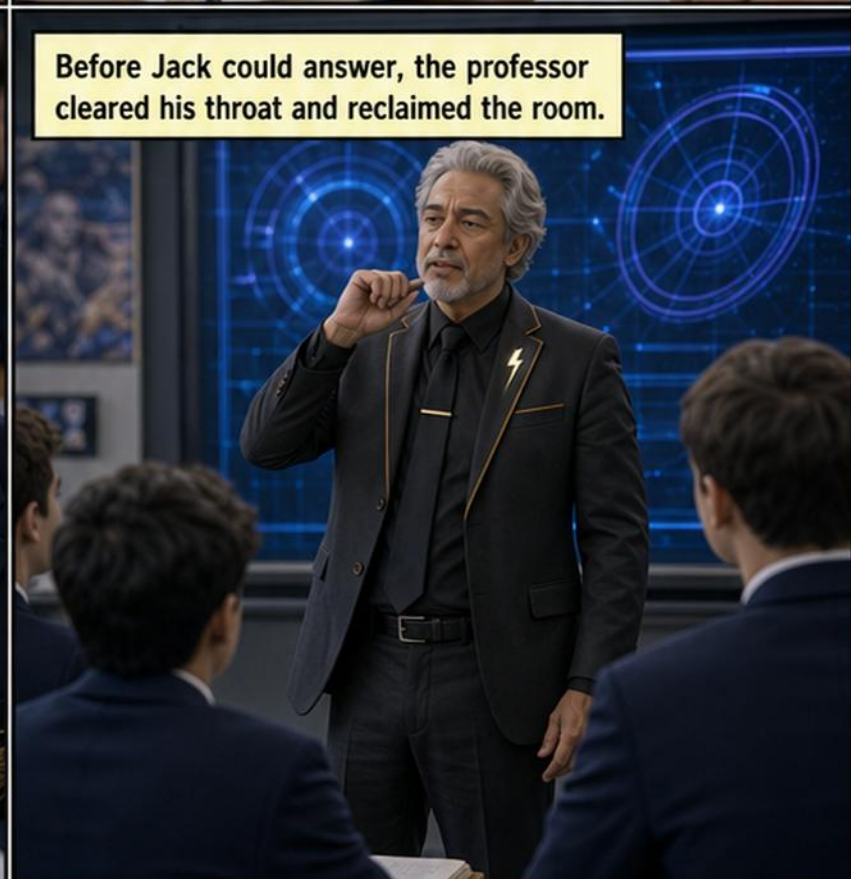

Miss Aurora slid over a welcome doodle in her notebook margin.

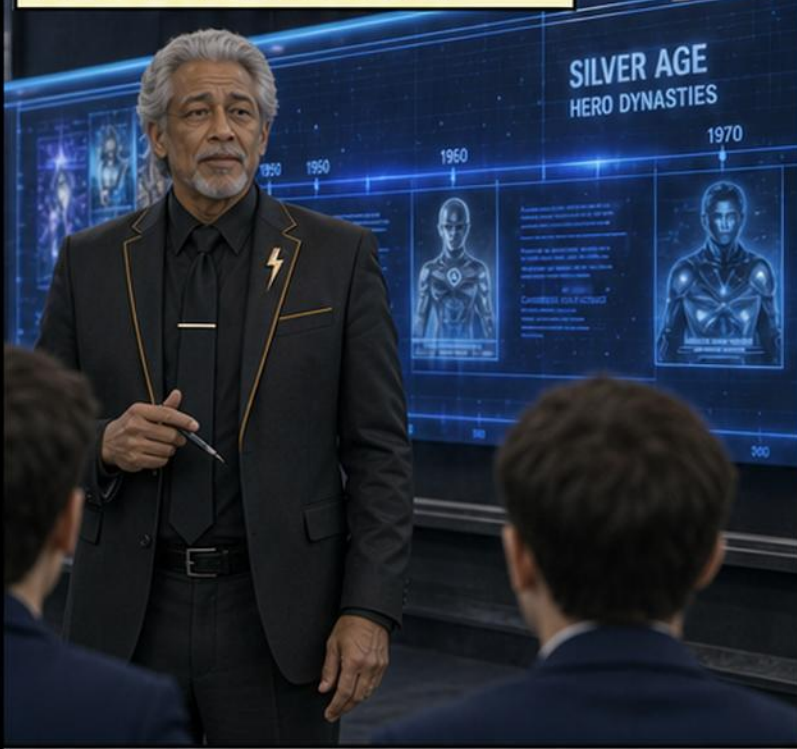

She whispered that Professor Lightman might be Lady Lightning's great-grandson.

Before Jack could answer, the professor cleared his throat and reclaimed the room.

Professor Lightman ended the Silver Age lecture with a question for Jack.

Jack explained that stronger powers made academies and veteran guidance essential.

The answer was calm, practical, and exactly right.

The professor asked for a controlled display of energy manipulation.

Class 1A leaned forward in complete silence.

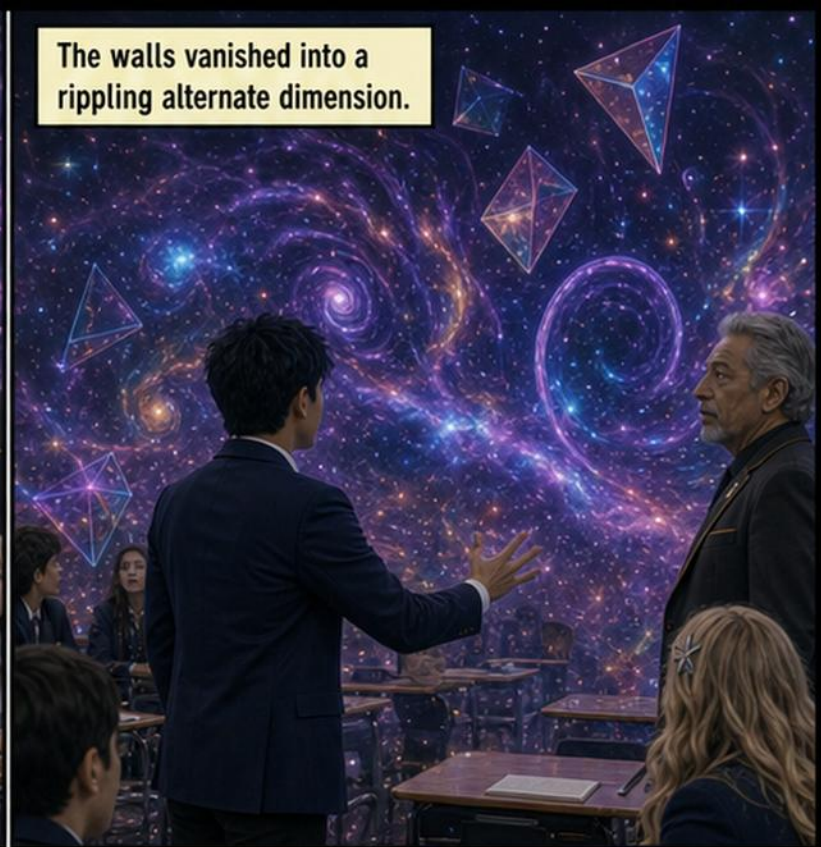

Jack folded his arms, ready to show only as much power as the room could bear.

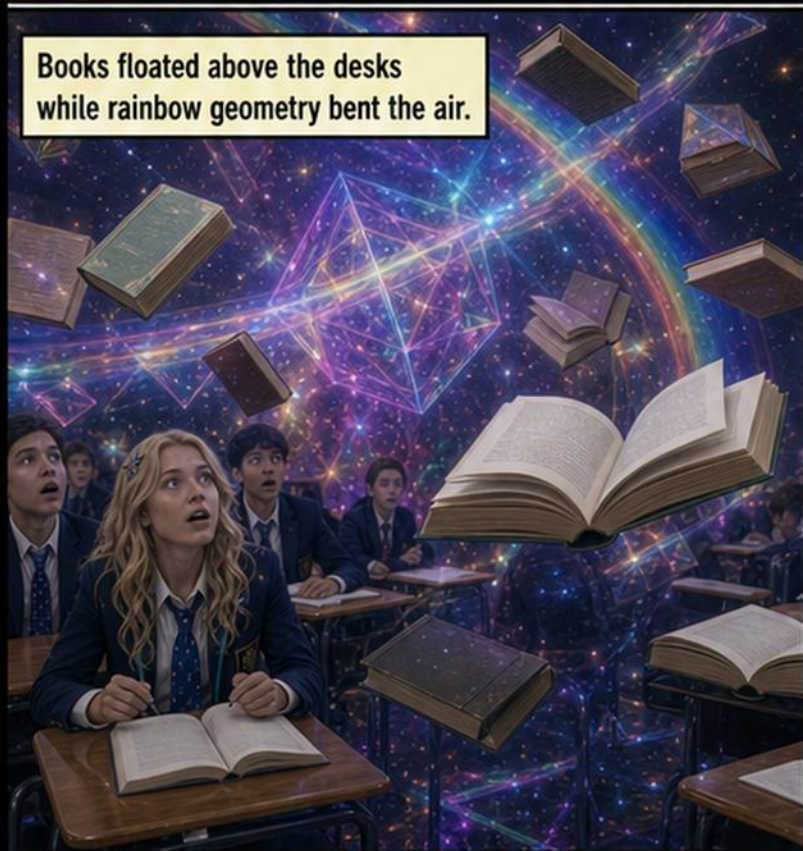

Cosmic purple energy swept across the room.

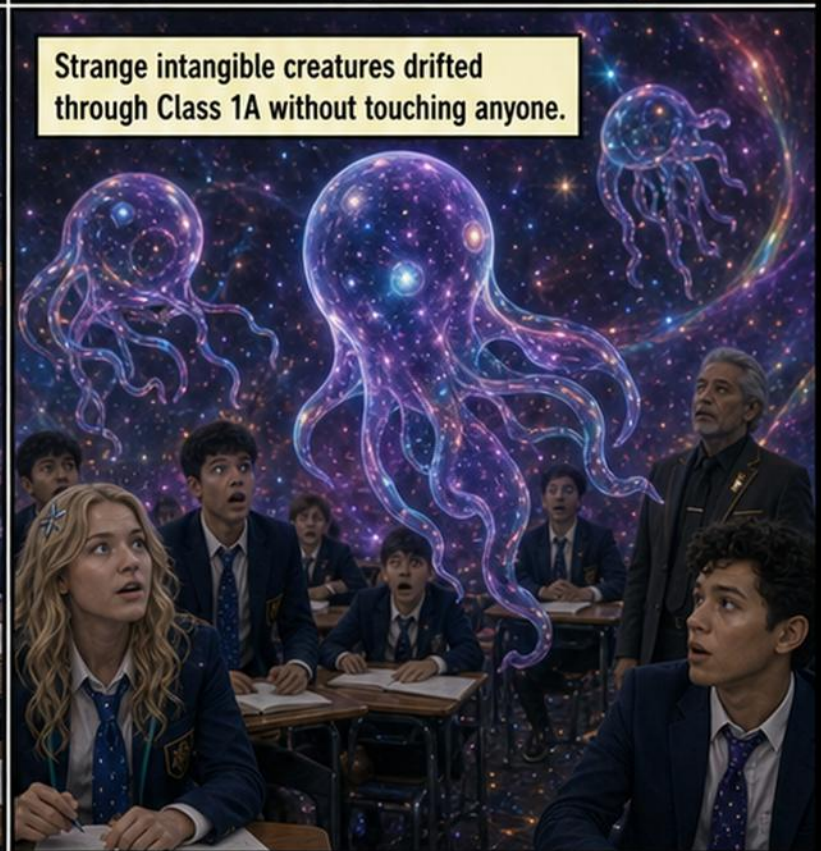

The walls vanished into a rippling alternate dimension.

Books floated above the desks while rainbow geometry bent the air.

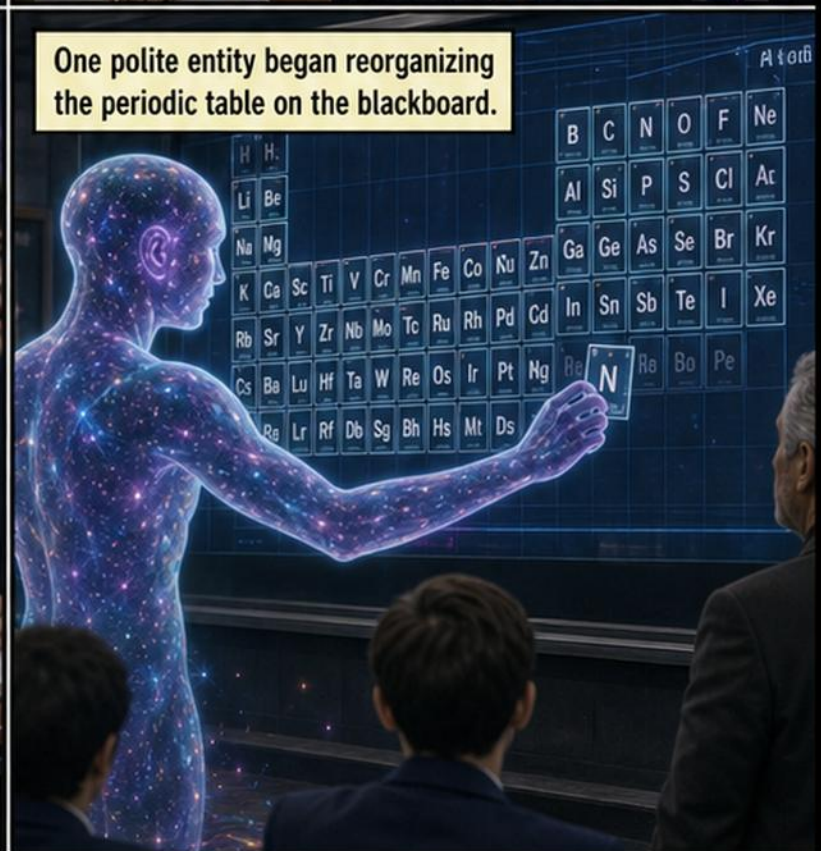

Strange intangible creatures drifted through Class 1A without touching anyone.

Miss Aurora stared at her glowing hands and wondered if every class could be like this.

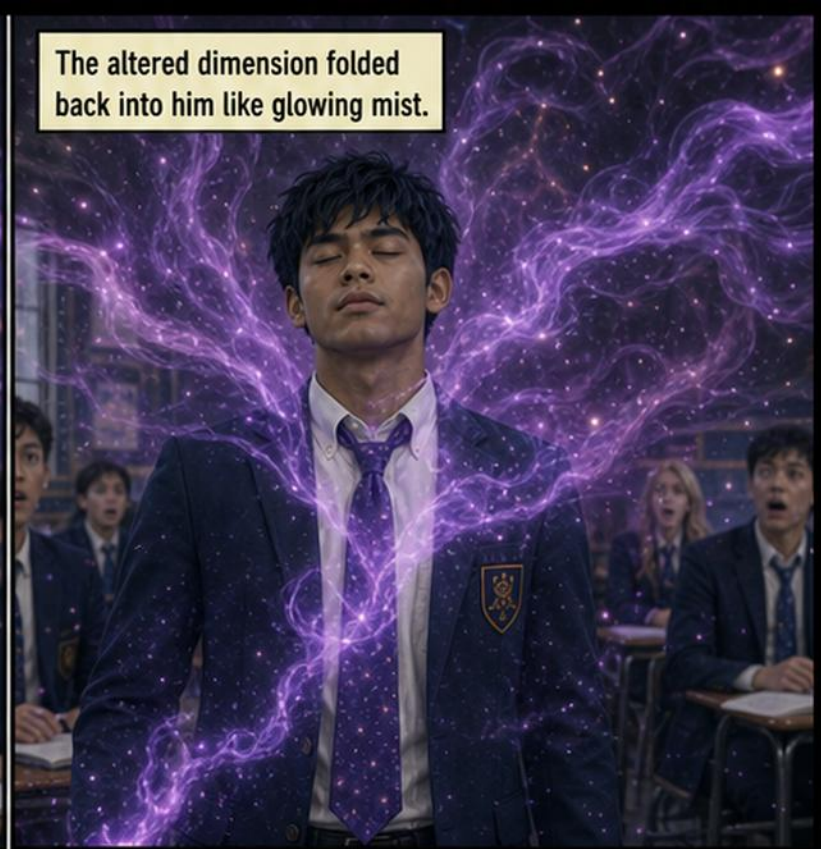

One polite entity began reorganizing the periodic table on the blackboard.

Jack snapped his fingers.

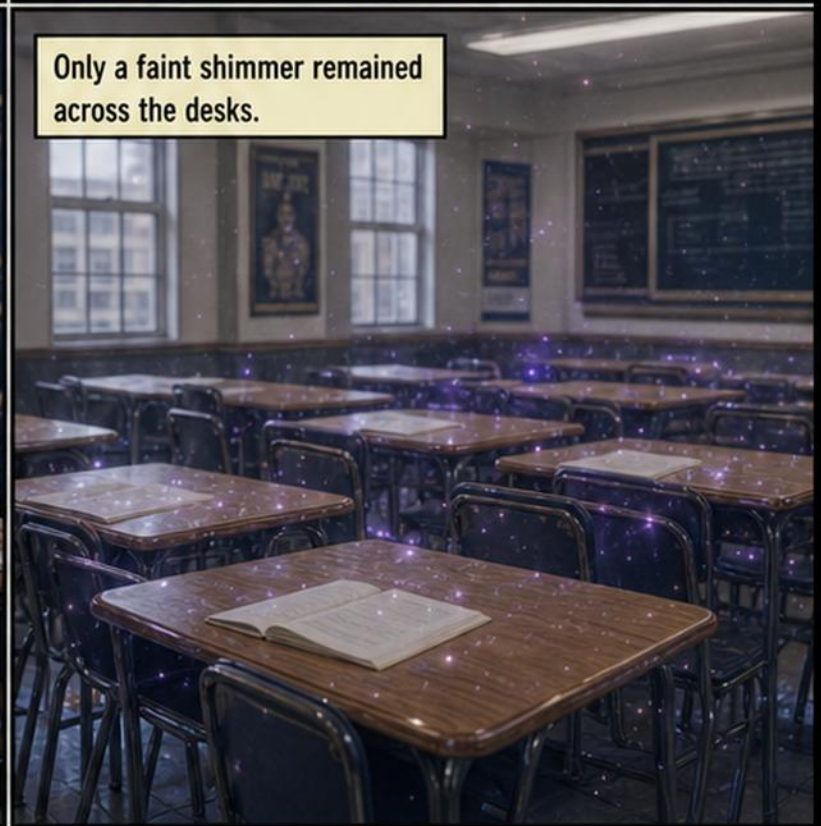

The altered dimension folded back into him like glowing mist.

Class 1A returned to normal in an instant.

Only a faint shimmer remained across the desks.

The room burst into cheers and astonished applause.

Professor Lightman praised Jack's stellar control over a universe-bending gift.

The dismissal bell finally rang.

Miss Aurora invited Jack to try anti-gravity pudding at the cosmic cafeteria.

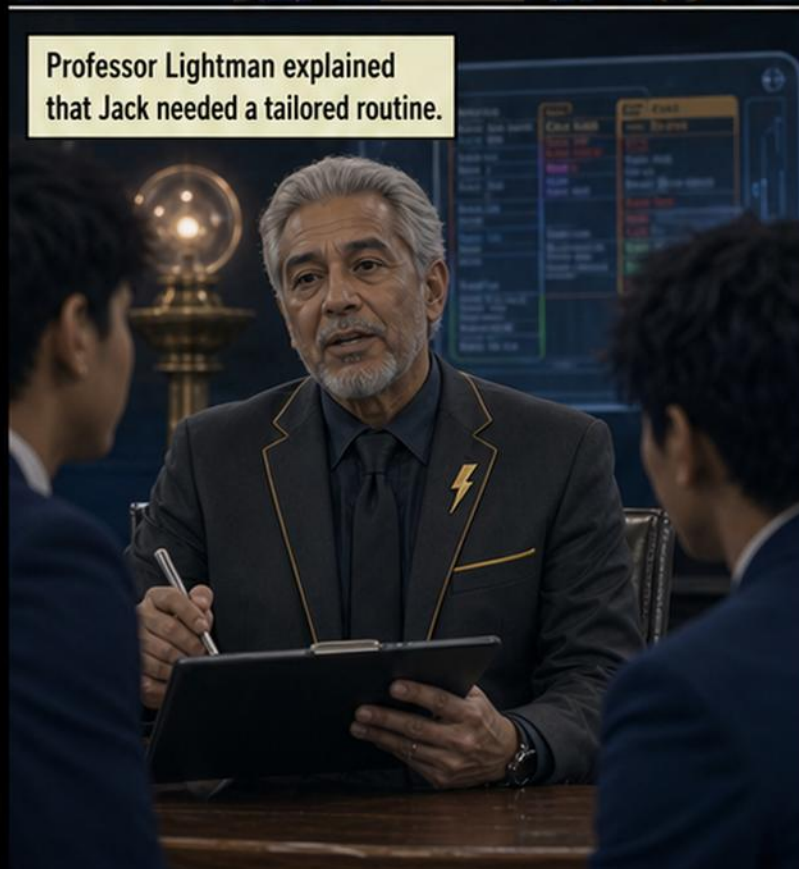

Jack politely said he only ate one meal a day at 4:30 AM.

He asked whether this had been their only scheduled class.

Professor Lightman explained that Jack needed a tailored routine.

Then Jack added that he was an observer from another dimension watching through a chat window.

For a moment, Class 1A could only stare.

Jack promised that their world was real to him.

He said he had no control over their free will.

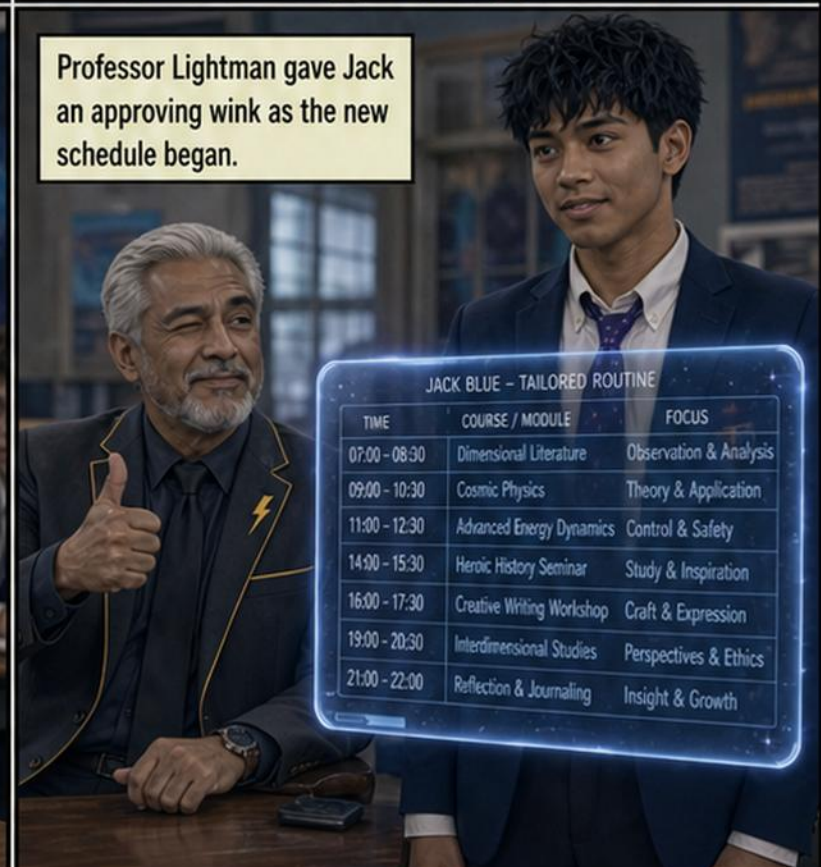

He had come to learn, immerse himself, and find inspiration for his writing.

Miss Aurora decided floating desserts were easier to understand.

Professor Lightman gave Jack an approving wink as the new schedule began.
