Lava Leviathan Co-Op

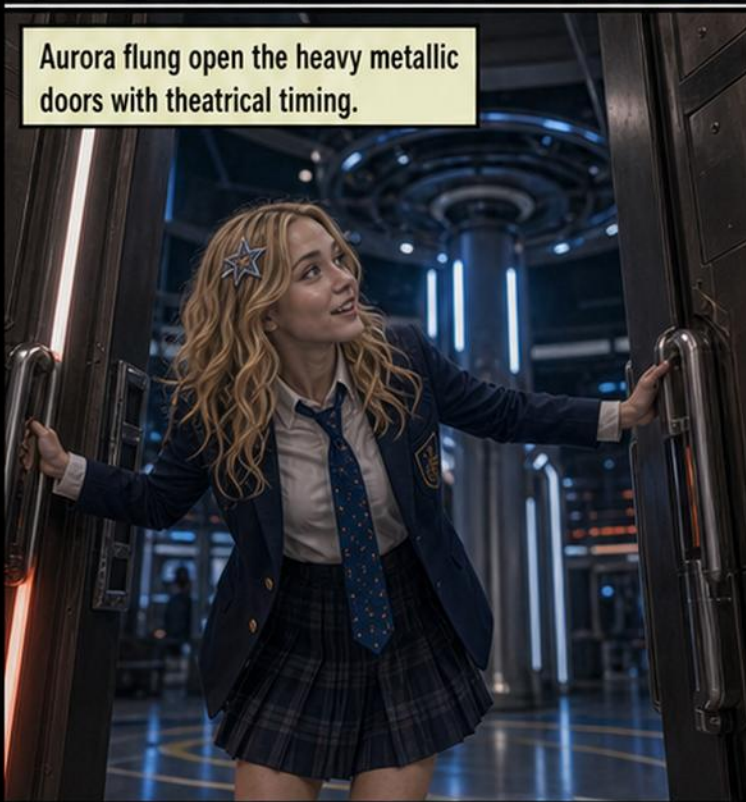

Jack followed Miss Aurora through the gleaming corridors of Power Academy.

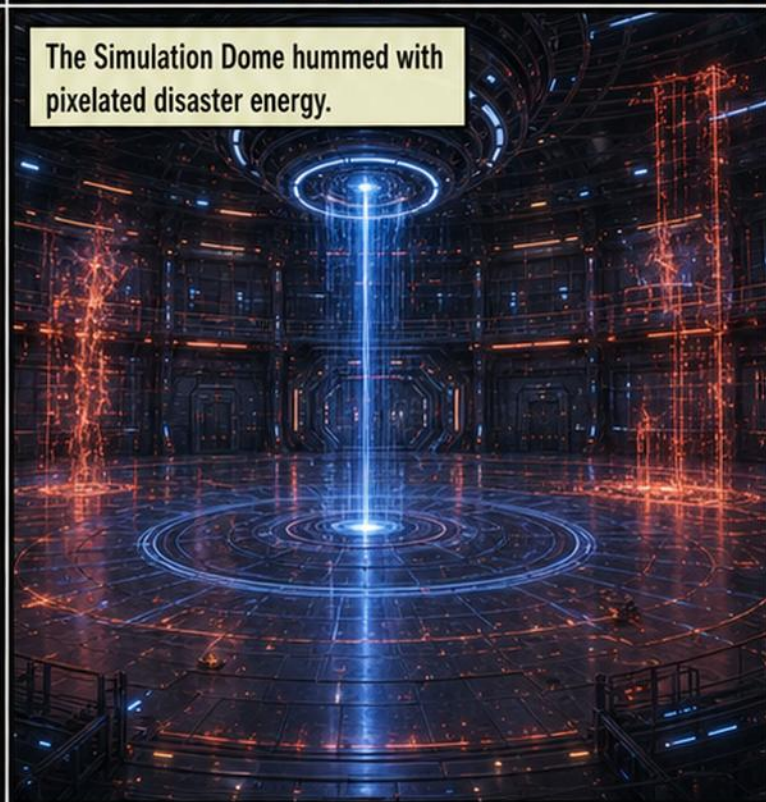

He wanted an immersive conflict to open his second issue.

Aurora flung open the heavy metallic doors with theatrical timing.

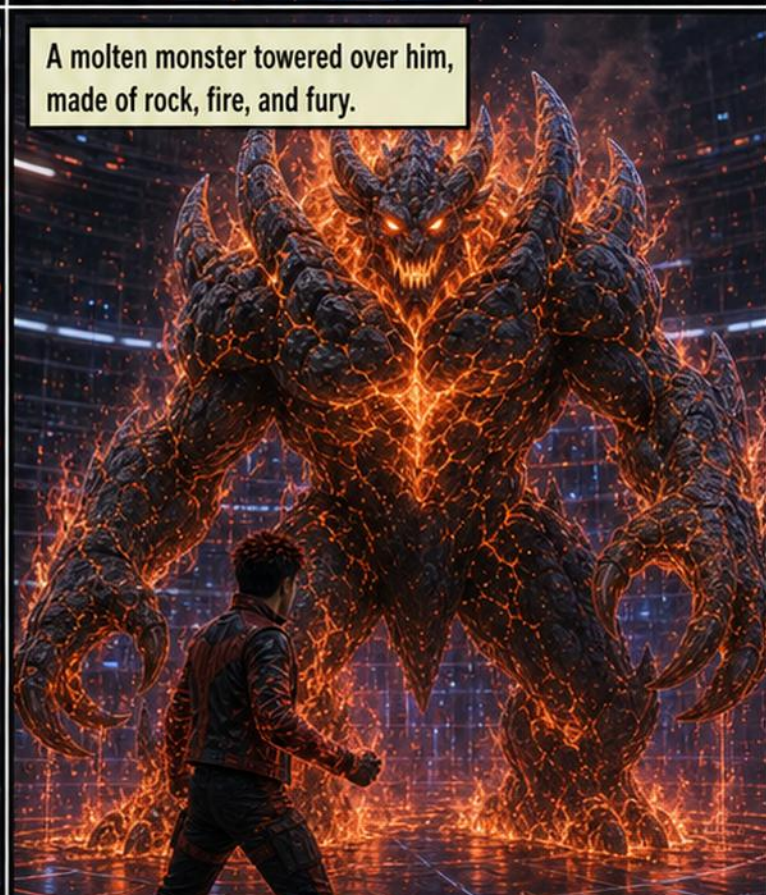

The Simulation Dome hummed with pixelated disaster energy.

At the center stood Blaze Carter, wrapped in roaring red flames.

A molten monster towered over him, made of rock, fire, and fury.

Aurora nudged Jack and named Blaze the academy's hottest energy manipulator.

Blaze incinerated a holographic minion without looking impressed.

His fiery gaze locked onto the new arrival.

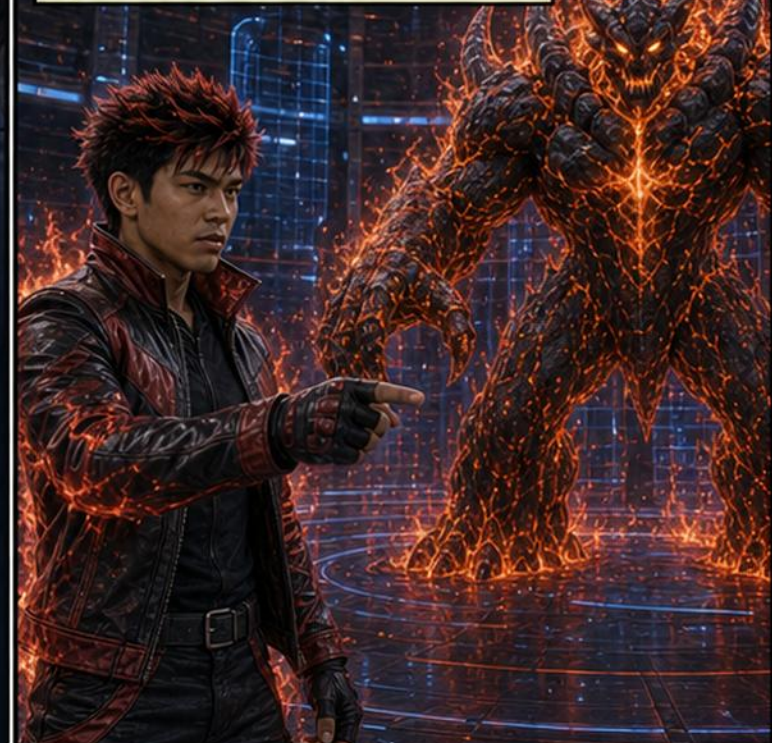

Jack offered a polite hand as the cosmic-powered new kid.

Blaze accepted, but only barely.

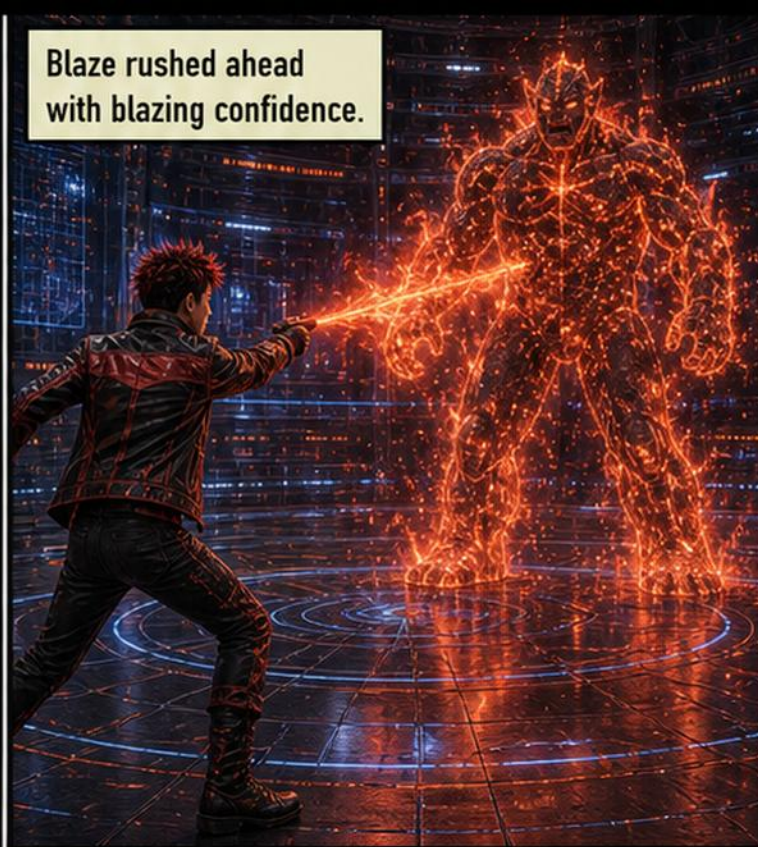

Then he challenged Jack to prove his powers against the Lava Leviathan.

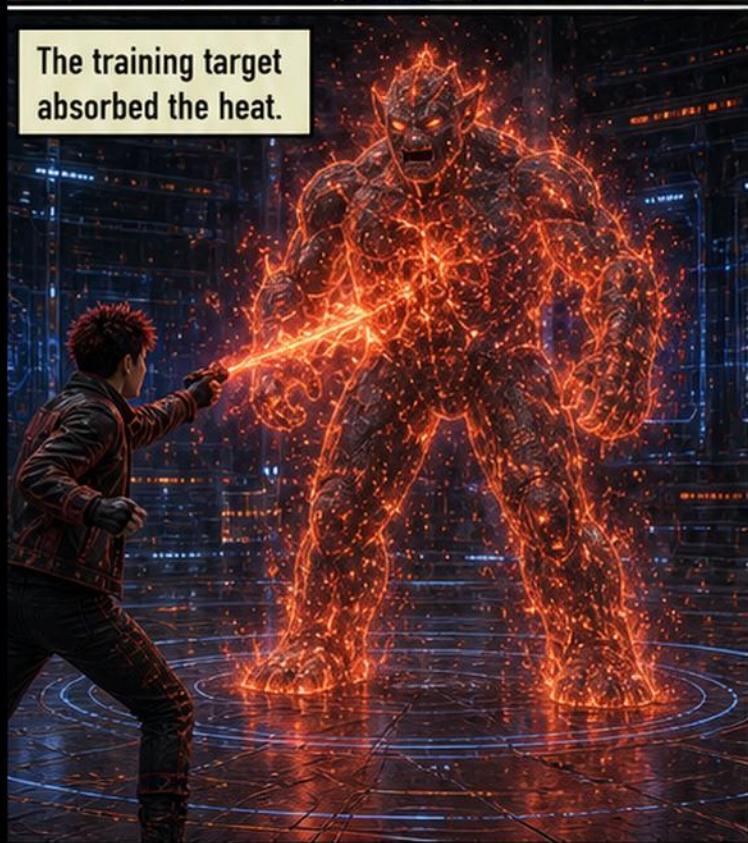

Jack accepted co-op mode.

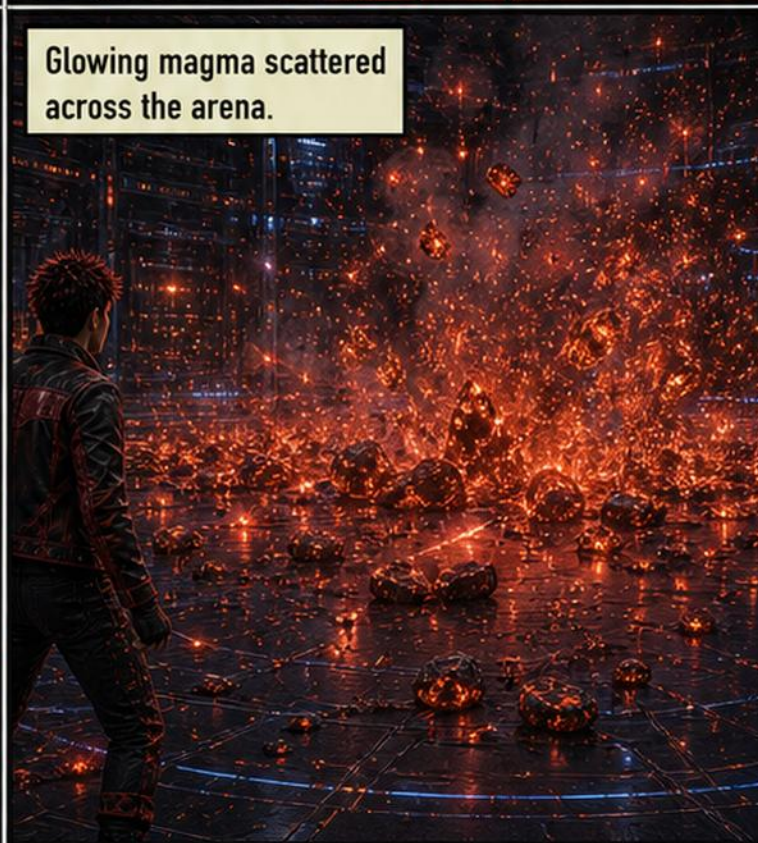

Blaze rushed ahead with blazing confidence.

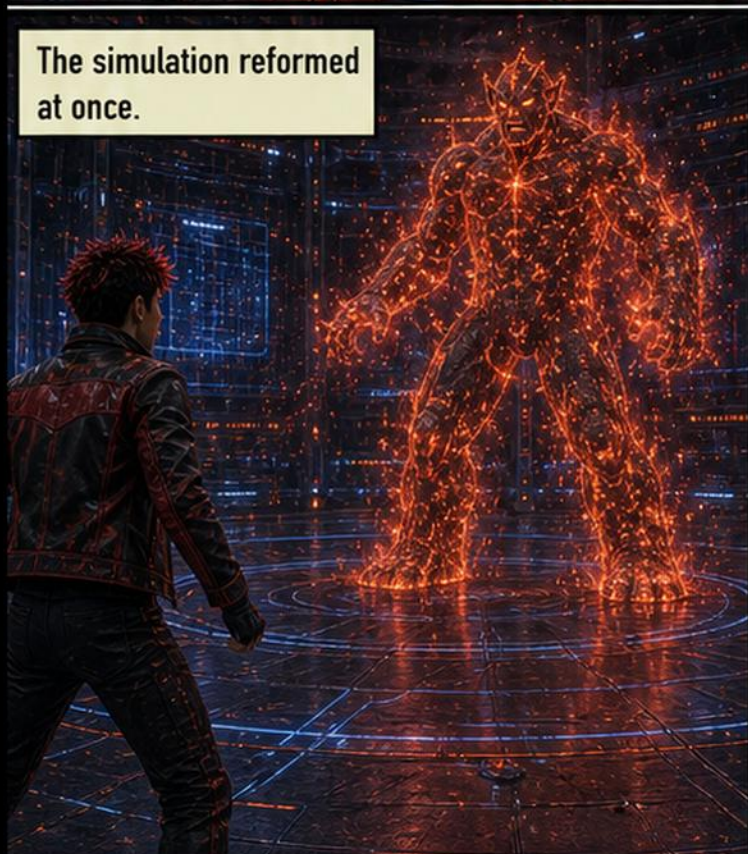

The training target absorbed the heat.

Glowing magma scattered across the arena.

The simulation reformed at once.

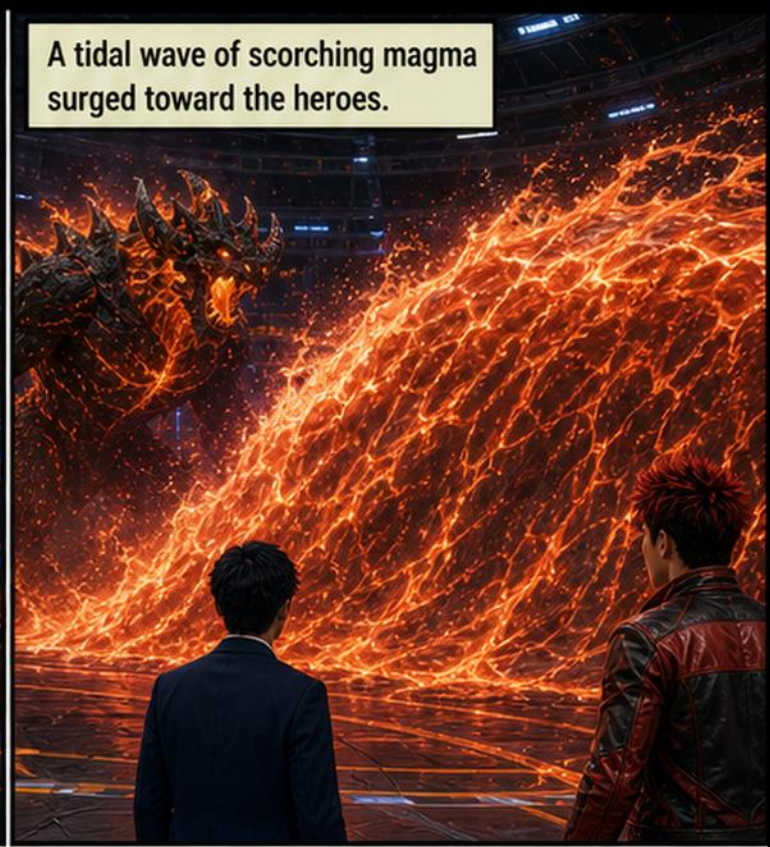

Jack watched for a better opening.

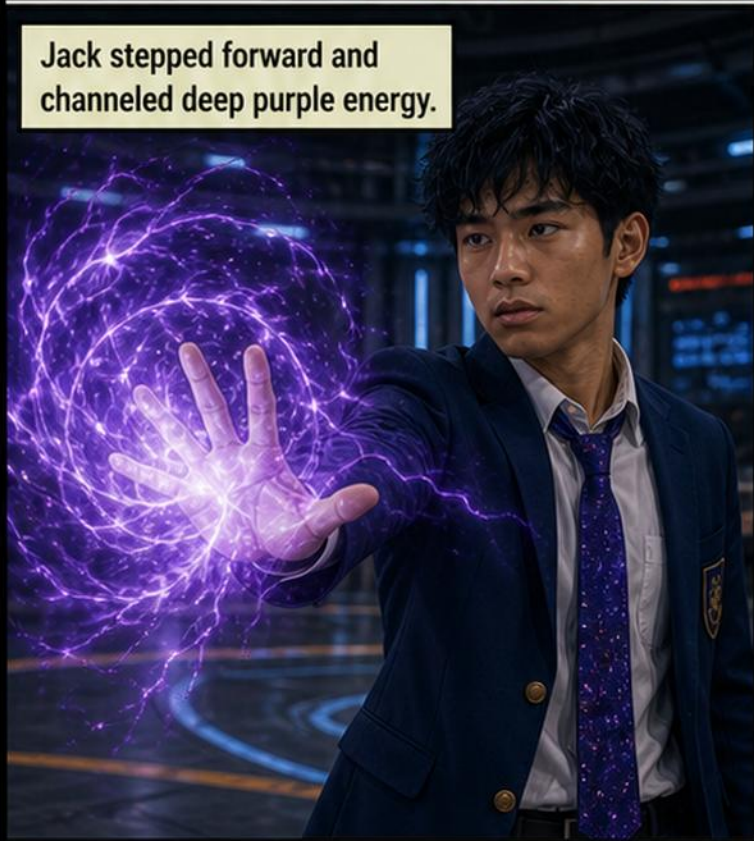

The Lava Leviathan reared back with a furious roar.

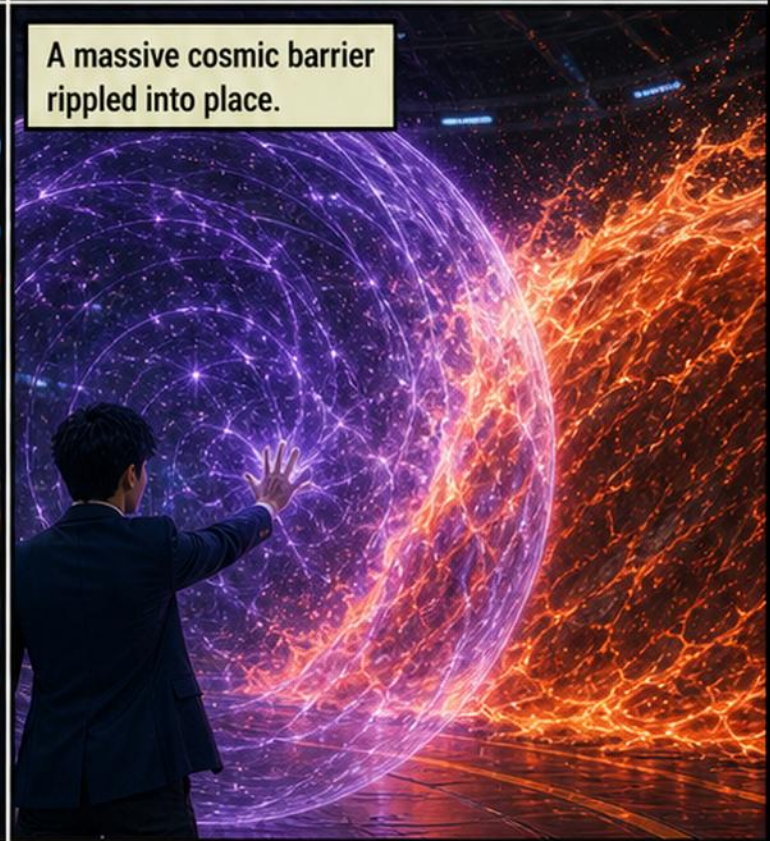

A tidal wave of scorching magma surged toward the heroes.

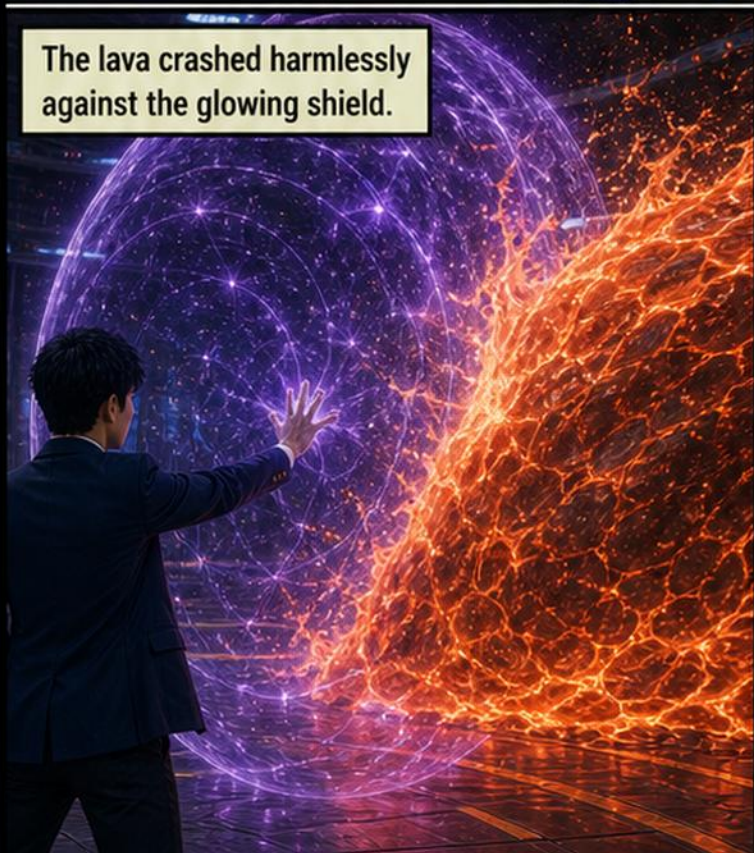

Jack stepped forward and channeled deep purple energy.

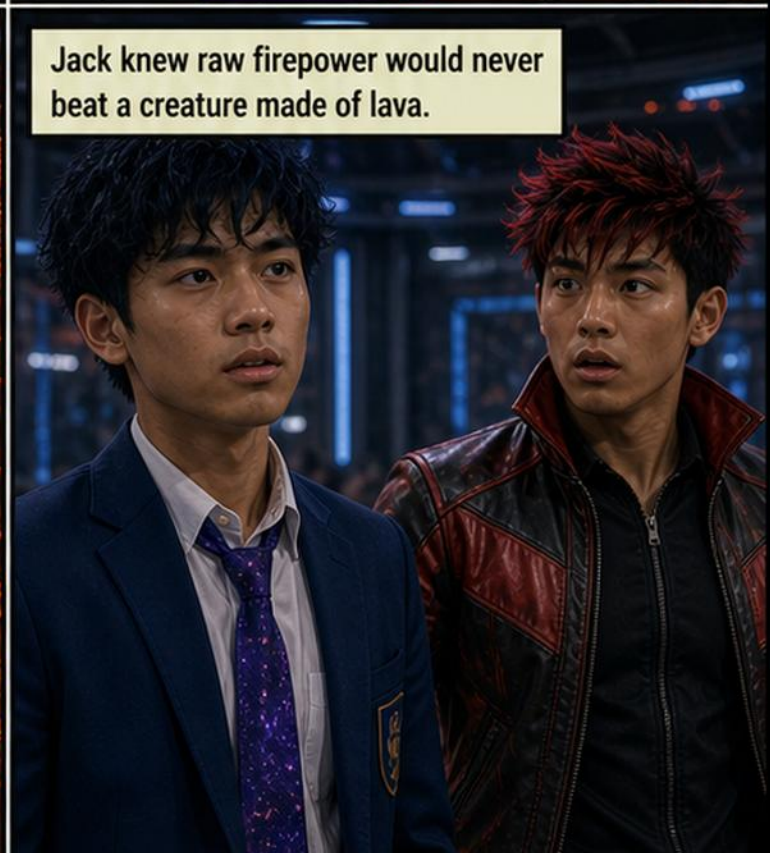

A massive cosmic barrier rippled into place.

The lava crashed harmlessly against the glowing shield.

Jack knew raw firepower would never beat a creature made of lava.

Jack turned rivalry into a plan.

A cosmic fan formed from purple light.

Cold wind swept across the arena.

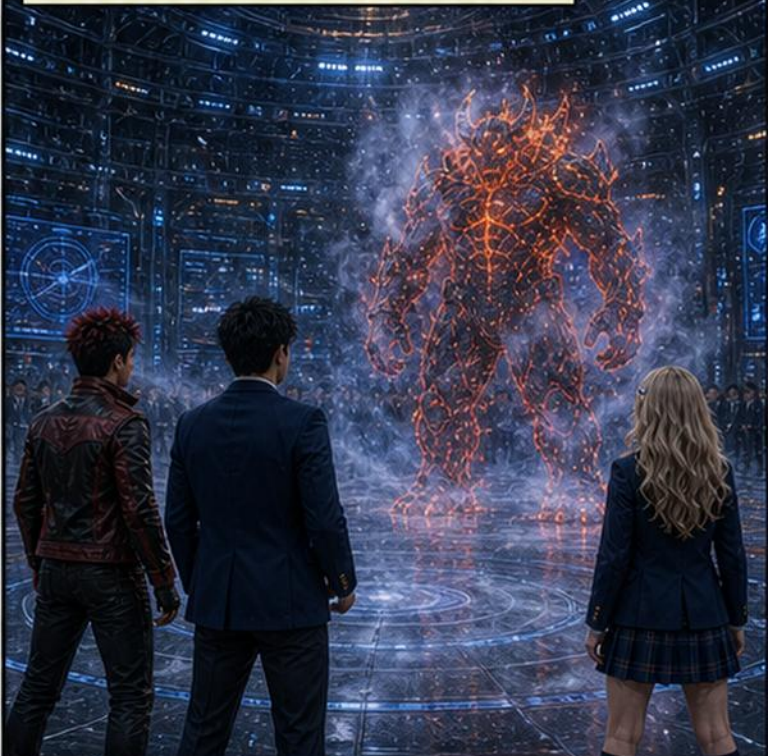

Blaze began drawing heat away.

Aurora prepared her strongest light.

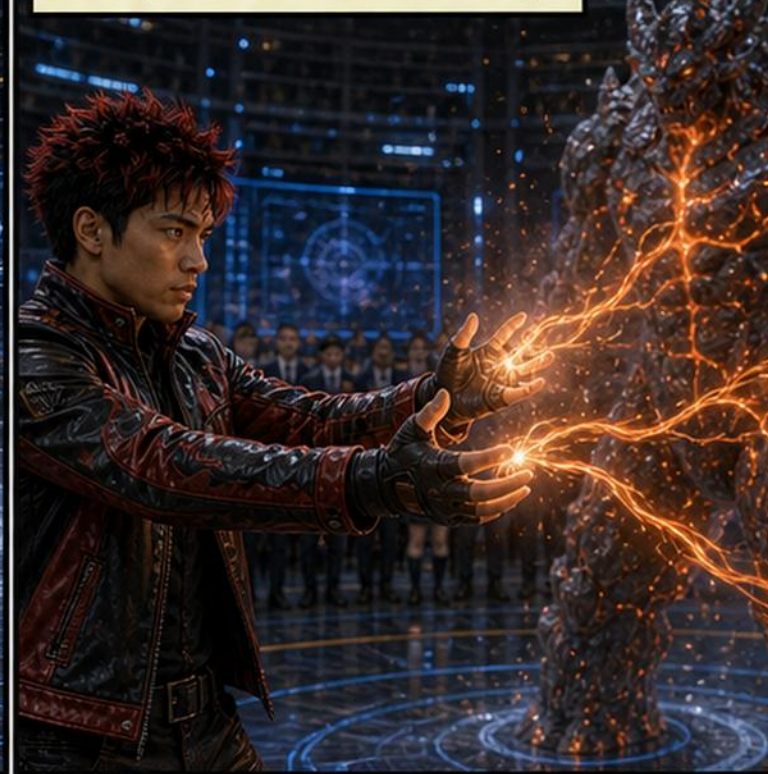

The training simulation started to cool.

The sudden cold made the Leviathan shudder.

Blaze siphoned heat instead of feeding it.

Orange energy streamed into his hands.

Black brittle rock spread across the monster.

The creature slowed to a frozen halt.

Aurora stepped forward for the finish.

Aurora lit sunlight in her palm.

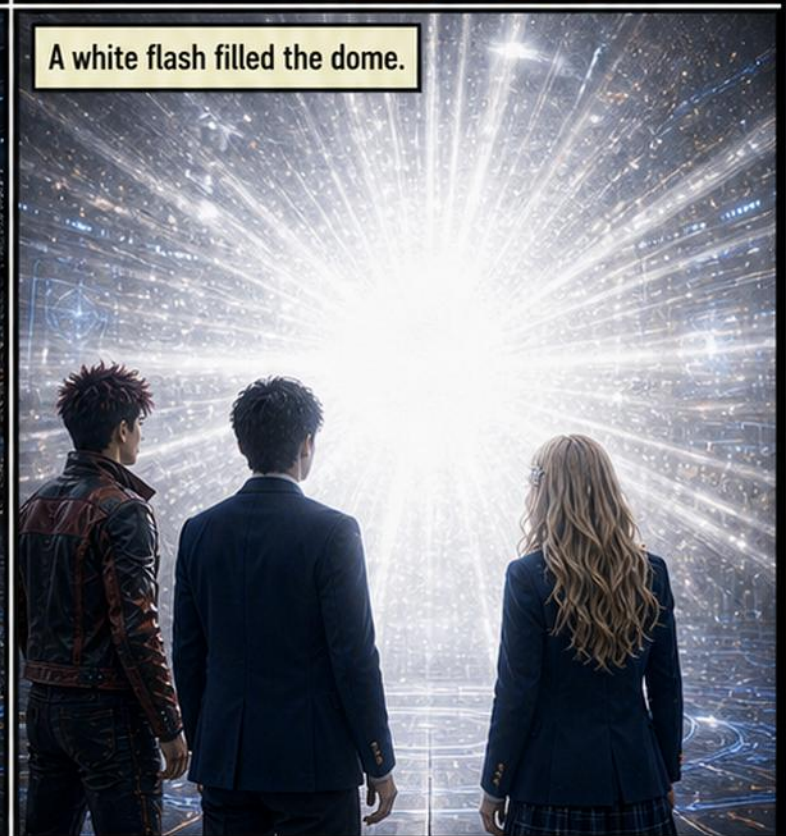

She named it Solar Sphere Strike.

The golden light reached the hardened core.

A white flash filled the dome.

The simulation broke into harmless shards.

The system chimed victory for the trio.
